When the Women Stuck Together

WILL women give a woman a square deal? It has been a subject of controversy throughout the ages. The balance of opinion has always held that she will not.

But a Detroit jury, composed of eight women and four men, just the other day granted a woman $450,000 in a breach of promise suit against a wealthy real estate operator. This was the largest amount ever awarded in a breach of promise suit in the United States.

Another question arises in this connection. Are there situations where women will instinctively stick together? Are Mrs. O'Grady and the colonel's lady willing to exercise sisterly support at times?

Certainly other women have sued for breach of promise under very similar conditions, but probably no other jury ever had so large a percentage of women jurors, under the same circumstances. There was not exactly a preponderance of evidence on either side, according to reports. There was room for argument and one's personal reaction was a necessary deciding agent.

The plaintiff had come to Detroit in 1917, became engaged to the defendant and had consented to postpone the marriage until her fiancé educated his younger brothers. Meanwhile he became wealthy, but orange blossoms and wedding veils didn't figure in the picture.

The man married another; returned to his first love four months later and told her the marriage had been a result of trickery and he would secure an annulment. He didn't. Then came the suit.

People have a habit of remarking that a pretty woman can get away with a verdict she desires from a jury of men. Women have been known to request that women be eliminated from the jury box. But in this instance women voted for a woman. One wonders what 12 good men and true would have done.

We Can Cook

AMERICAN cookery comes in for a good fit of criticism from world travelers. We are told that we do not prepare food in an appetizing manner, and that the cooks of Europe have it all over us.

For all we know this may be true. But we talked recently with a gentleman who had just come back from 10 years in Europe, during which period he had dined in all of the famous restaurants overseas and had eaten the favorite dishes of all the great chefs; and this man said that the best thing about getting back to America was the fact that he could eat some good American food once more.

Perhaps, then, our cooks aren't as bad as they're said to be.

"Them Days Are Gone"

COMMENTING on the fact that the Hattiesburg American has recently invested more than $40,000 in a new perfecting press to more adequately serve its city and territory, the Columbus Commercial-Dispatch says:

"Verily, the day is gone when a man with $9.80 and a shirt-tail full of type can start a newspaper and keep it going. It takes a lot of money to equip a newspaper plant these days, and it requires both brains and money to keep one going after it is started."

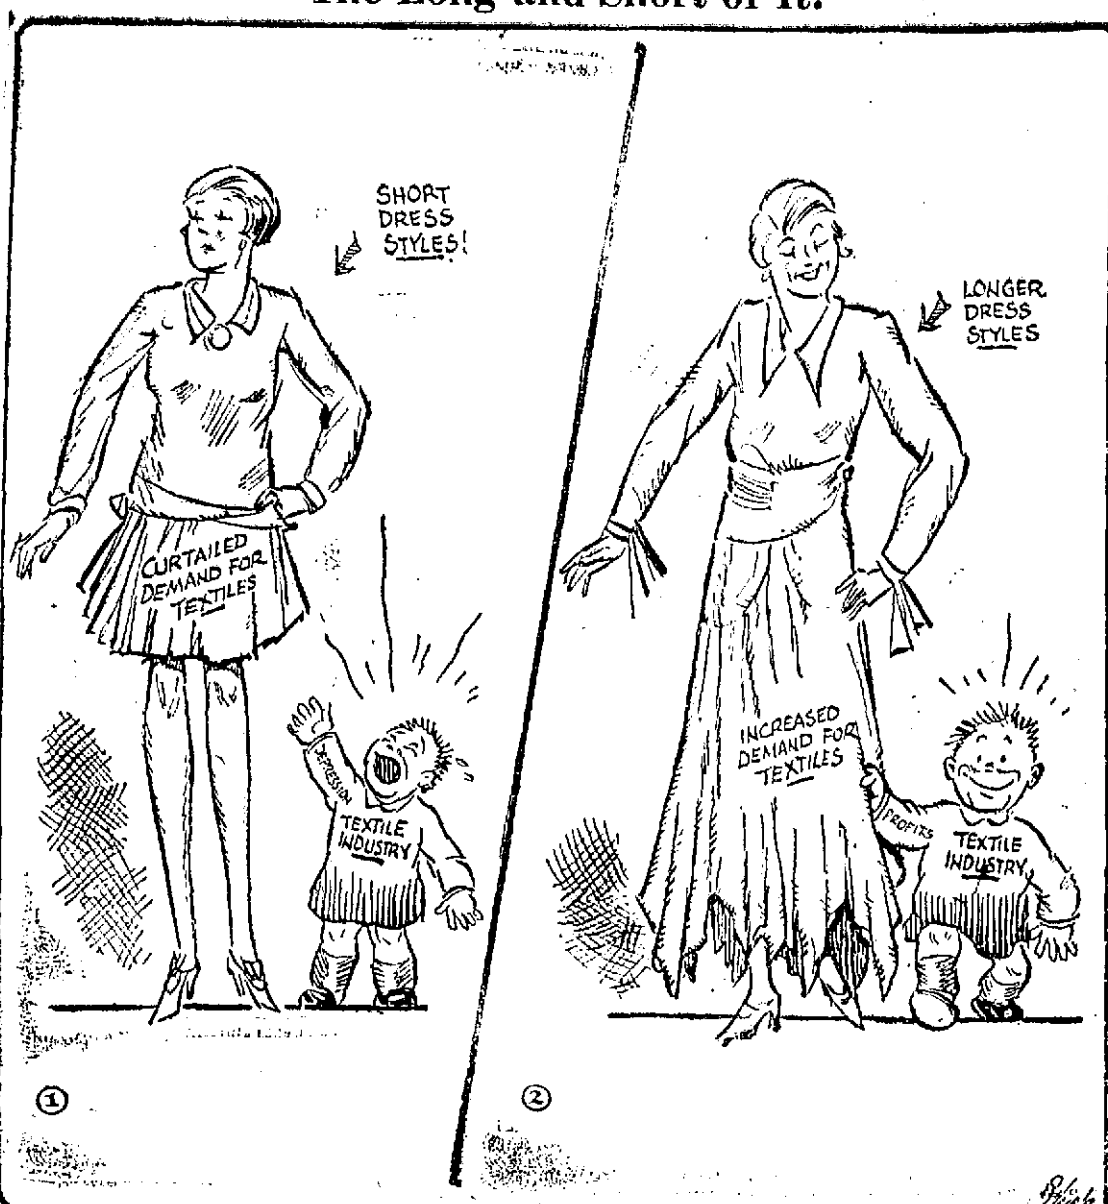

A little more than a year ago, when the Times-Leader started a perfecting press on which to print its semi-weekly editions, more conservative newspaper men shook their heads dubiously, and several of them told us face-to-face that we could not possibly earn dividends on so large an investment in a town the size of West Point.

But the growth of the paper has more than justified our faith in the community, and some of these editorial neighbors who were most skeptical then are now making preparations to follow our example.

Modern equipment is now necessary to the success of any business or industry, and the man who attempts to operate a sizable industry "on a string" these days is doomed almost certain failure.

Yes, "them days are gone forever."—West Point (Miss.) Times-Leader.

The Long and Short of It!

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Writer

NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—The oldest man in point of priority of service in either branch of Congress is Representative Henry St. George Tucker of Virginia. He took a seat in the House in 1889. So did the late Senator Burton of Ohio.

Henry St. George Tucker is a man of many parts. He will be 77 years old in a few months. His own career has been remarkable enough, but when you take it along with the record of his family you find yourself dealing with a story which is absolutely astonishing.

Every generation of this family has been represented in Congress since the founding of the government and Henry St. George Tucker's father and grandfather were congressmen before him. Great-grandfather Thomas Tudor Tucker represented South Carolina in the first, second and third congresses.

Related to Randolph

His nephew, Henry St. George Tucker, who was none other than the present Henry's grandfather, was elected from Virginia and served from 1816 to 1820 along with his famous half-brother, John Randolph of Roanoke. In the eighteen-twenties Professor George Tucker of the University of Virginia represented the Lynchburg district for several years. Then John Randolph Tucker, the present Henry's father, served from 1875 to 1887.

Henry St. George Tucker served from 1889 to 1897. He refused to let the Democrats renominate him on a free silver platform in 1896.

Not until March, 1922, when he was 70, did the old boy return to his old seat. He was only 33 when first elected. In the meantime he had practiced law and had become successively dean of the Washington and Lee University law school and the George Washington University law school. He had been elected a president of the American Bar Association. He had been president of the Jamestown Exposition and had written several books.

"I had always been an ultra-states' rights man and saw an opportunity to come back, chiefly to help save some remnants of states' rights," he says in explaining his return to Congress. "I have always opposed bills such as the educational bill, which would establish a department of education with a cabinet member. The federal government hasn't any constitutional right over education. I have been twice instrumental in defeating that educational bill. I also fought the maternity bill all along and we finally killed the law, although the president threatens to bring it up again."

Once upon a time Mr. Tucker was even such an ardent states' rights man that he opposed prohibition, but it didn't do any good.

It's another extraordinary thing about the Tucker family that every male member of this line for five generations has been a professor of law.—the great-grandfather, the grandfather, Henry St. George Tucker, himself and his son. And there's a grandson of Congressman Tucker's who is expected to be one sooner or later.

Mr. Tucker and his father also happen to have been the only two men of the same family ever made presidents of the American Bar Association. The father had the honor in 1894 and the son 10 years later.

News of Other Days

From the Files of the Star

WASHINGTON—Twenty-five years ago a petition has been drawn up by our business men and will be circulated next week for the purpose of making Hope a city of the first class.

Miss Ethel Tidwell of Buckner, was in the city yesterday en route to Philadelphia for a visit.

J. F. Riggs returned Sunday from a Christmas visit to Denison and Sherman, Texas.

Miss Lucile Hanna, of Pittsburgh, Texas, is visiting Mrs. J. D. Cotton.

Guthrie Sain, a promising young attorney of Nashville, was in the city Sunday, returning from a Christmas trip in the Territory.

W. Y. Foster spent Christmas week in New Orleans. He returned from the Crescent city Saturday night.

John Barlow has returned from a hunting trip near Mena, Polk county.

TEN YEARS AGO

Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Crutchfield held a family re-union during the holidays when all members of the family were present, including Mrs. W. A. Lowry of New Boston, Texas; Mrs. Bun Williams, and three sons, of Texarkana; Earnest Crutchfield, of Nashville; Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Crutchfield and Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Crutchfield and family of Hope.

Mr. and Mrs. U. W. Parr entertained on Christmas day with a six o'clock dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Lasater.

Little Miss Louise Hanagan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Hanagan, celebrated her ninth birthday anniversary with a party during the holidays, at their home on South Elm street. About twenty five little friends and schoolmates were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Kinser entertained with a turkey dinner at 6 o'clock Friday evening for Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Porterfield, Malcomb Porterfield.

There'll come a time, of course, when the only place you'll see short-skirted ladies will be in the family album.

One out of every 1000 people are put in jail, says a government bulletin. That doesn't sound like nearly enough.

The Russian government has prohibited the possession of Christmas trees. Maybe if that was done over here, the day would be more popular.

Another Hempstead County Man Making Fall Pasturage Pay Big

Legume Club In County Grows As One After Another Farmers of County Turn Attention More and More To Growing of Feed Stuffs.

Jim Mildow of Hope, Route 4 reports that he prefers to sow Red Clover instead of Sweet Clover. Jim firmly believes that Red Clover will grow more feed and pasture on his land, whether he plants Red Clover, Sweet Clover, Soy Beans, Cowpeas or Mung Beans. He is eligible to membership in the Hempstead county Legume club. A goal of 8,000 acres of legumes for the county was set at a meeting during the lime campaign which was put on the first part of December. The object in getting as many as 8,000 acres of legumes planted is to furnish abundant feed for the 8,000 dairy cows in the county, and to build up permanent fertility in the soil.

L. C. Summerville Hope, Route 3, reports that he failed to get a stand of Sweet Clover last year. He believes the main cause was that no lime was applied to the land. The following facts should be kept in mind about lime:

1. It will not drain land.
2. It is not a fertilizer.
3. It sweetens the soil and acts as a "conditioner" for the soil. Most all legume crops grow well in lime soil. There is especial need for lime in soil where sweet clover is expected to be planted. It is perhaps a waste of seed to sow sweet clover on upland soil without liming and perhaps manuring.

Following are some of the reasons why Sweet Clover is a desirable crop to grow:

1. Good hay crop.
2. Good pasture crop.
3. Good soil builder (a legume) while Sweet Clover is a well known crop in the Black or lime land section of the county less is known of the crop in the up land sections. A few instances are known where the crop has been successfully grown on upland, especially where lime has been applied at the rate of from 2 to 5 tons per acre. Alfalfa is very particular about the kind of land it grows on. Sweet Clover is particular, but not nearly as much so as Alfalfa. The crop has sufficient merit to justify our trying it in a small way.

If you expect to sow Sweet Clover it should be planted on fertile soil.

Christmas is over now and we are ready to get down to work. Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rogers spent Christmas with his brother John Rogers of El Dorado.

The Christmas tree was enjoyed by the little children at this place. Mr. and Mrs. Sanders of Senter spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Howard Collier last Thursday.

Now that we've traded in our fiver, we can't remember what to step on when the milk wagon turns around in the middle of the block.

And now, boys, give the little old taxpayer a big hand.

and the soil should be limed.

Several have made inquiry about more lime. This can be secured, not at as cheap a price as the trainload was bought at, by leaving orders with the county agent. At least 40 tons must be ordered before a car can be unloaded.

Sweet Clover should be planted in a well prepared seed bed about March 1, and at the rate of 15 pounds of seed or more per acre. Plant at least an acre and try it.

BABIES' LIVES SAVED BY SUNLIGHT
Artificial "Sunshine" Urged by U. S. Children's Bureau in Battle to Reduce Infant Mortality Rate.
It long has been a matter of edge that more boy babies than girl babies are born every year and that more boy babies die. For every hundred deaths among girls under one year of age in the United States there have been at least one hundred and thirty deaths among boys of the same age.
For some time past the United States Children's Bureau, a government agency which is charged with a wide range of responsibilities concerning child welfare, has been engaged in a study of the statistics obtained for the birth registration area of the country and the problems they represent.
Of outstanding importance among its findings is the statement, contained in a recent official announcement, that the regional and seasonal differences which have been found in the sex mortality ratios seem to be dependent upon the amount of sunlight reaching the infant. The greater need of the male infant for sunlight is indicated by his greater tendency to certain diseases, such as rickets and tetany, which develop when the amount of sunlight is insufficient.
In discussing means of reducing the number of infant deaths, the Children's Bureau states that the recently discovered artificial "sunlight" appears to be one of the chief weapons now available.
The rays of natural sunlight would seem, of course, to be the ideal means of combating this infant mortality rate. And they are, under certain conditions. However, the strength of sunlight is variable. The fall, winter and early spring when the sun is farthest from us are the times when our national death and sickness curves reach their highest points. But, even in midsummer it is difficult, because of our mode of living, to get the benefits of sunlight into our systems. Sunlight will not penetrate clothes. Also, it has been proven that in most cities and in industrial areas, some of the vital elements of sunlight frequently are screened out altogether by clouds and smoke haze. As for babies, it frequently is a fact that the rays of the midsummer sun are too strong for their tender skins.
Carbon Lamps Like Sun
Although no detailed recommendations are given for the use of artificial sunlight as a solution for this problem, another government agency, the Bureau of Standards, has been conducting a highly scientific quest for some means of reproducing for home use all the rays found in the light that comes from the sun. As a result of this investigation, it was announced that carbon arc "sunshine," the

"WHOOPEE" 400 YEARS OLD SAYS DIRECTOR OF FILM

Making whoopee didn't start with the collegiate generation. It began at least four hundred years ago, according to Sam Wood, motion picture director, who rises to point back to old literature in support of this rather startling declaration.

"Away back in 1450," Wood says, "mankind" now quite forgotten by theatre-goers, "such ribald talk as this is to be found in the lines 'Hay doo! Hay WHOOPE!'"

"Then in 1530 we find that Plutarch penned this in his works: 'WHOOPEE a lowde, and thou shall here hymn bloue his hoen.' Moreover, it is recorded that 'WHOOPEE' became a popular street rally cry in London in 1593.

"No I don't profess to be able to tell you that they made the same kind of whoopee in those days that they do now, but anyway, I think I've proved that the word was coined long enough ago for Texas Gullin to claim her own."

Wood, who directed "So This Is College," which opens at the Saenger Theatre at Tonight's New Years Eve Show as Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's newest talking-singing-dancing feature is co-author of the story as well.

Explains Changes In Model A Cars

Tom McLarty, Local Dealer, Has Model Bodies On Display.

"The most notable changes in body designs of the Model A Ford, to be showing here today have been made in the Tudor Sedan, the Coupes and the open cars," said Tom McLarty, local Ford dealer, today.

"The Tudor Sedan has been the most popular of the five passenger models," he continued. "The new body design will bring to it additional beauty and the new choice of colors is certain to make it more popular than ever, particularly with women drivers.

"More room will be provided for occupants of the rear compartment. Access will be easier around the folding seats in front. In exterior appearance, the car will be much improved.

"It still will retain the crown roof effect with rounded corners on the rear quarter, the beauty of which will be accentuated by an entirely new design body belt and moulding treatment.

"The coupe, too, will be entirely new in design. It will have a lower roof line. French roof quarters will emphasize the low effect and the long lines of the new moulding treatment. A panel effect carried out by the moulding on the rear deck will add much to the smart appearance of the car.

"Lowering of the roof line will not bring any loss of rear room inside, and driving will be made more comfortable by an adjustable seat, which may be moved forward or backward to suit the driver's convenience.

"The Sport Coupe, which will have a rumble seat as standard equipment, will have all the lower body lines of the coupe. The sport treatment will be carried out above the belt line, as heretofore. The roof line will be lower, also, and in this car, too, driving comfort will be improved by the installation of an adjustable seat. The same feature will be extended to the Convertible Cabriolet.

"The two open cars, the phaeton and roadster, are entirely new in design, with long, lower lines, and more beautiful appearance."

Shires: You Just Can't Keep Him Down

If you think Arthur (The Great) Shires is going to fold up just because George Trafion knocked him around a little, you have another guess coming. "I've just begun to fight," said the Powerful One after taking a licking from the former Notre Dame football star in Chicago the other night. "There's no bound in me."

The crowd that witnessed the Shires-Trafion brawl received a valuable little lesson, by the way, in physical training. Both of the young men, who have been living an athletic life for several years, were so used up after the first wild round the ring during the last four, too spent to raise their hands. The fact also is a commentary on the rigors of boxing, the most strenuous game. After seeing Shires and Trafion waddle around, you can understand how a fighter is an old man at 30.

Rocky Path Ahead

Mr. Shires also probably understands that he has a long way to go before he is a fighter. In his first engagement, with the exotico Dan Daly, Arthur simply stepped out and smacked Dan on the chin and that was all of it. Shires' brawls with Lena Blackburne weren't such strenuous affairs either. The first time Shires met fairly rugged opposition he wilted. What would Shires do against a professional fighter when he failed so signally against a football player whose wind was not the best and who entered the ring with a large roll of flesh amiship? However, Arthur is willing to learn. And he has an alibi for his defeat at the hands of Trafion.

He Credits Trafion

"I gave away too much weight but I guess I showed the fans I could take a punch as well as throw 'em," says Arthur. "I was dizzy for two rounds after George socked me with that right in the first round. But I went out on my own power."

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

When Art Shires was in the Texas League, he and a certain catcher had a little argument one night about this and that. It was in a hotel room and Shires was in bed. . . . The catcher finally got red under the collar and threw an electric fan at Arthur. . . . And the fan was going. . . . "Just another sap I had to lick," says the Whispering One. . . . Shires says he did not take up baseball. . . . "They just had to have me. I was a star at Waxahachie high school in Texas. . . . And the wonderful catches I made I was a chesty kid then." . . . When Shires showed up for his first workout in the gym the instructor told him it would take six months to learn how to hold up his hands properly. . . . "Say, I'm no thick-skulled, top-eared bum," retorted Art. "Just tell me what's to be done and I'll pick it up fast enough." . . . "And I guess I kind of surprised the fellow the way I took to boxing."

ALABAMA CAPTAIN NOT OLD FOOTBALL HEAD

TUSCALOOSA, Ala., Dec. 31.—Charles B. "Foots" Clements, Alabama football captain-elect, never saw a football until he entered the academy of Arkansas Tech six years ago.

He lived 15 miles from a railroad and all he knew about the sport was what he read in the newspapers.

Towering 6 feet 8 inches, the big linesman has the largest feet in Southern conference football. He wears number 14 gunboats which have to be made to order.

Eddie Shires Follows In Brothers Footsteps

FORT SMITH, Ark., Dec. 31.—(AP)—Eddie Shires, younger brother of Arthur (The Great) Shires, aspires to fame such as that which has come to the loquacious Chicago White Sox first baseman.

Eddie, hitch-hiking to join the great one in Chicago, tarried here long enough to announce his plans.

Eddie, like his brother, has won his first pugilistic engagement. He stopped off at Wichita, Kan., to watch a fight, and when one of the preliminary fighters failed to appear, Eddie "subbed" and put away his man easily.

The younger Shires recently "fell out" with an official of the university of Denver, he said, and decided to temporarily abandon his pursuit of a higher education.

End Averages 46 Yards On Ball Lugging Jaunts

DAVIDSON, N. C., Dec. 31.—Football bookkeepers at Davidson college have this to offer on Thad Brock, captain and end:

He averaged 46 1-3 yards a trip in his ball toting, reeling off 139 yards in three journeys.

He made a 71-yard punt and a 102-yard run in the same game, against Duke.

He kicked ten out of 14 tries for points after touchdown, enabling Davidson to win two extra point decisions, 7 to 6 and 13 to 12.

Hubert Furman and Bill Brody of this city the BJ ETACINETAO Batesville spent yesterday visiting in this city the guest of Miss Miriam Carelton.

Then modestly, Arthur adds: "I want to give Trafion full credit, however, for the fight he put up." That shows you how seriously this young ball player takes himself.

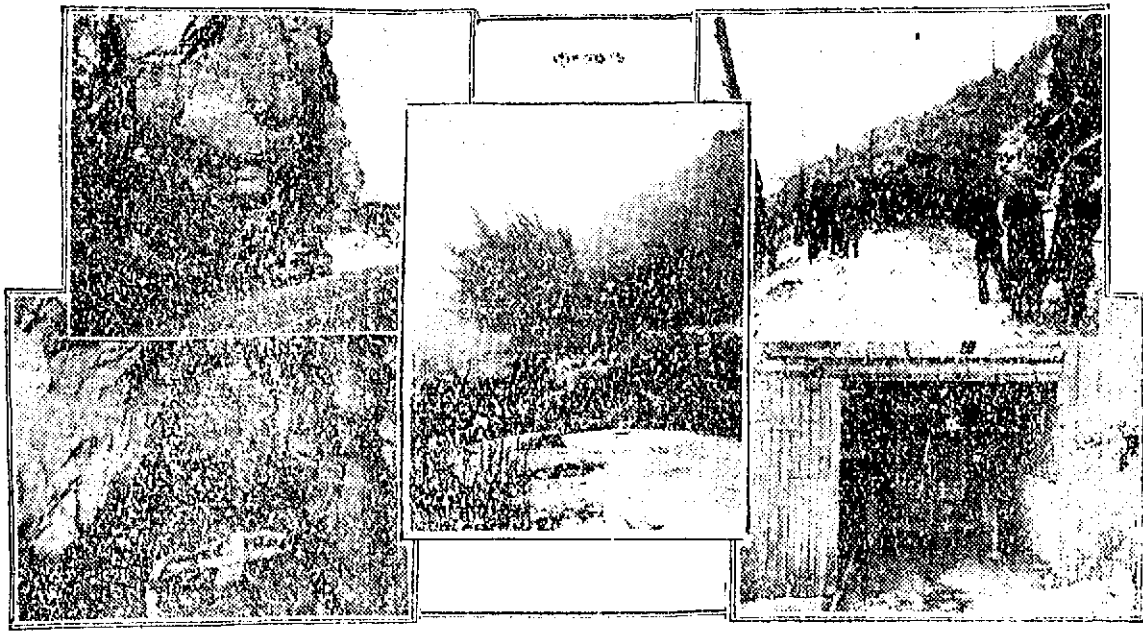

Honors Reporters, Too

Shires gives great credit to the gentlemen of the press.

"You newspaper fellows have made me," he said the other day. "I'm just another inspiration for stories. The fact that I am good at anything I try is circumstantial, of course."

"I'm just an accident that saves you people in a dull season. I came along at just the right time for you. During the last year there hasn't been much to write about—the inauguration of a president, the Graf Zepelin, the stock market crash, a few catastrophes here and there—but there wasn't much doing at all until I showed up."

Blasting Mountain for New Road

An unusually large blast for a road building job was recently made along the Delaware River near Easton, Pa. Nine tons of black powder were used to loosen 30,000 pounds of rock from the face of Weygant Mountain.

The Pennsylvania Department of Highways had ordered that more than thirty feet be cut from the face of the cliff in order to eliminate a sharp curve and make the road safer.

Jobs of this kind are usually handled by many small blasts, but because of nearby residences and much traffic along the highway, a 4' x 4' tunnel was driven fifty-five feet into the mountain. Laterals were then run to the right and to the left. At the termination of these laterals, pockets were drilled to receive the powder, and when all preparations had been made, the entire face of the mountain was shot down by one tremendous blast.

The contractors, Dawes and Norris, had taken out a large amount of insurance to cover any property damage that might result, but because of preliminary work had been so well planned and was so well executed that not even a pane of glass was broken in the nearest house, only a few hundred feet distant.

Seven hundred 25-pound bags of Du Pont powder were used. The drilling was done with an Ingersoll-Rand "Jackhammer" which was operated by an Air Portable Air Compressor. Because of the small size of the tunnel, the loosened rock was removed in wheelbarrows.

Complete costs are not available, but it is estimated that the cost per ton of rock loosened was lower than if the job had been handled in the usual way.

Ford Will Spend Over 30 Million

1929 A Record Year, With Nearly Two Million Automobiles.

DETROIT, Dec. 31.—Confidence that the Ford Motor Company's business will in 1930 see a continued expansion was expressed by Edsel B. Ford today when he announced expenditures during next year of more than $30,000,000 for plant development.

This announcement came on the heels of the introduction of new body designs for Ford cars, the recent general reduction in car prices, and wage increases scaling upward from a minimum of $7 a day.

In the plans of the Ford Company for expansion of production facilities, more than $20,000,000 will be spent next year for new buildings and plant additions, and in excess of $10,000,000 will be expended for plant equipment. These expenditures will be made in various sections of the United States and are exclusive of new outlays by affiliated plants in foreign countries.

Several of the expansion programs will affect plants on the Atlantic and

Hero in Haiti

A southern-born girl, Mrs. Robert Maumus of New Iberia, La., was the heroine of a clash between U. S. Marines and rioting Haitians at Auxayes, say dispatches. She was the first to notify the marines of the rioting and directed them to the scene of the disorder.

Pacific Coasts. This is in line with the Ford policy of development and utilizing water transportation wherever feasible and economical.

M. Ford said that the highest state of development in the history of the Ford Motor Company was reached during 1929. He added, however, that still further development was contemplated during 1930, and that he anticipated this would justify, in part, the recent increase in wages which will result in additional payments of $20,000,000 annually to Ford employees.

During the first eleven months of 1929, the Ford Company produced 1,944,812 cars and trucks. When the Ford Company decided to improve its Model A car by embodying added beauty of line and color in the various body types, it had reached the point where it was producing more than one-third of all the automobiles being manufactured in the United States.

Plans of the Ford Company for development during 1930 are a continuation of general expansion that has been under way throughout the world during this year. A new, self-contained plant, modeled after the River Rouge plant at Detroit, has been started in England. This plant will manufacture cars, complete, from basic materials to finished product. Notable expansions have taken place in the Orient.

During this year, plants throughout Europe have become more closely identified with the countries in which they are situated through substantial stock ownership in these countries. These include plants in France, Germany, Belgium, Holland, Denmark, Spain, Sweden and Finland.

U. S. To Stand On Rights In China

American Courts Will Operate Despite Any Mandate of Nationalists.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Activities of American consular courts in China which deal with the judiciary requirements of the 11,000 citizens of the United States in the Far Eastern republic, will continue after January 1, with cases concerning their nationals.

Despite any mandate of the Nanjing government decreeing abolition of the extraterritorial right of American citizens in China, the American government will take stringent measures to maintain these rights.

Beyond the statement of Secretary Stimson that the United States would stand firmly on its attitude expressed in the note of August 10th, to the Chinese government, State Department officials have declined to comment on the mandate issued by the Chinese declaring the abolition of extraterritorial rights of foreigners residing in or visiting the republic.

Secretary Stimson in a note to the Chinese government August 10 on the subject of extraterritoriality, indicated that it was the opinion of the United States that gradual relinquishment of the extraterritorial rights could not take place until the Chinese had established and made effective a code of laws shaped according to the modern concepts of jurisprudence.

At the same time, the American government declared its willingness to enter into conversations with the Chinese looking toward devising a method for such gradual relinquishment of the extraterritorial rights under which American citizens in China roughly speaking, are subject only to the laws of their own country. These laws are administered by the so-called consular courts and mixed courts, dealing with different types of cases in which Americans in China are involved.

Treaties between the two countries, dating back to 1844 granted these rights to Americans in China. The treaty of peace, amity and commerce between the two nations signed in

Smead Jolley Comes East

Joins Old Teammates and Add To Woes of American League Hurlers.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—(AP)—"Smack 'Em" Smead Jolley, the super-socket from the Pacific coast league, is coming east in 1930 to add to the cannonading begun in the American league last season by his old teammates, Roy Johnson and Earl Averill. Smead, one of the latest White Sox acquisitions, hasn't missed the .385 mark in five years and reckons he is due to stay around that average in the big circuit.

Some angles of baseball appeal to the fans' imagination even when most of the country is locked in snow and ice.

And one of these angles concerns "Smack 'Em" Smead Jolley's scheduled arrival in the majors in 1930. Jolley, who goes to the White Sox, needs only to keep step with Earl Averill and Roy Johnson, the other members of San Francisco's great outfield whom he paced in 1928, to assure himself of wide acclaim his first year in the upper grade.

Averill and Johnson were picked up by Cleveland and Detroit respectively, soon after the official 1928 average showed their true slugging strength. Many other clubs inquired about Big Jolley, but found his price tag too high.

So Smead had to continue massaging coast league fences for another year to prove that he, too, should be promoted. His cause was helped measurably by the way Averill and Johnson whanged the apple in the American league.

In 1928, Jolley made 314 hits, scored 172 runs and bagged 35 homers, finishing with a batting average of .385. Johnson hit 314 for Detroit, establishing himself as a slugger by getting 48 doubles to lead the league.

Averill, now branded as another Trip Speaker, batted .331 and showed he also was a long distance hitter by getting 73 extra base blows, 42 of which were doubles.

Jolley, who is six feet, two inches tall and weighs 210, hasn't the speed that Averill and Johnson possess, but he is stronger at the plate. He batted around .390 for the last five years and in 1928 hit more than .400 to lead the coast loop.

If he can keep it up with the White Sox Art Shires will be assured of a dangerous rival. In this case it would be "Smack 'em" Smead's bat vs. the Great Shires' tongue.

1841, stipulated that: "The subjects of China who may be guilty of any criminal act towards citizens of the United States shall be arrested and punished by the Chinese authorities according to the laws of China; and citizens of the United States who may commit any crime in China shall be subject to be tried and punished only by the consul, or other public functionary of the United States, thereto authorized, according to the laws of the United States."

The treaty rights supporting the extraterritorial system was elaborated in subsequent treaties. The treaty of 1858 provided that all questions between American citizens in China and foreigners should be settled according to treaties without interference by the Chinese government.

Sam Head of Memphis Tennessee and H. J. Phillips of Pine Bluff were in the city Saturday the guest of Miss Miriam Carelton.

Year-Round Green Stuff Now Planned

Climate of State Adapted To "Ever Growing Garden" Plan.

PAYETTEVILLE, Dec. 31.—(AP)—The suggestion of planting "ever growing gardens" has been brought forward as a method of solving the scarcity of green vegetables during winter months by Miss Connie J. Bonslagel, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture, extension service agriculturist.

Under the comparatively even-tempered climate of Arkansas the problem of growing gardens during the entire year does not present such an impossible aspect, according to Miss Bonslagel.

The plan advanced by the University extension service would find the winter garden planted in late July or August, and mid-winter planting for spring use.

By this procedure green vegetables of hardy nature—carrots, turnips, parsnips—whether growing, stored or banked in earth, can be made to last until early spring from late fall planting and harvesting.

Housewives, disliking "gardens of the can variety," should plan their year-round gardens with a view to coming as well as actual growing and harvesting, thus supplementing the returns from their winter plots.

"Spring gardens should be planned, planted, 'worked' and kept growing with the cunning budget in mind," declares Miss Bonslagel. "Better this practice than depending upon a hazardous succession of plantings to last until frost, with only the possibility of something left to can."

Through careful planning in this matter, an "ever-growing" garden can be made an important item in the family budget, Miss Bonslagel believes.
